

Revisiting a Bad Study: Map Tasks as Place-Making Mapping Narratives

Dr. Melody Ann Ross, Universität Duisburg-Essen
ILANSCO 2024, University of Zurich
September 14, 2024

JALAN AVENIDA A STREETNAME STORY IN TIMOR-LESTE

JALAN AVENIDA A STREETNAME STORY IN TIMOR-LESTE

● JALAN AVENIDA (FORTHCOMING, BLOOMSBURY PRESS)

● TOPOONYMY PROJECT IN TIMOR-LESTE

● 400 YEARS OF STREETNAME (CHANGES)

● → CRITICAL TOPOONYMY

● → LINGUISTIC LANDSCAPES

● → CRITICAL DISCOURSE STUDIES

Jalan Avenida

Starting Point: Revisiting Old Studies

- 2015 Perceptual dialectology map-task of Timor-Leste study
- Basic results: Participants labeled administrative divisions more than linguistic; task was deemed a failure
- Problem 1: The map was too ‘weird’
 - Left off Indonesian part of island; precluding cross-border languages

Street Names, Group Maintenance, and Identity-Construction

- How does colloquial knowledge strengthen / threaten (1) group cohesion and (2) individual identities ?
- What patterns arise in spatial narratives of ‘navigating’ Timor-Leste?
 - Next phase of Jalan Avenida: collecting narratives from the UNAMET mission, 25 years later: How did you get to your field office? What happened when you had to leave?
 - Directional tasks in Dili (Timorese and malae): Where can I go to buy tickets for the ferry?
 - Travel stories, firsthand or otherwise: How do you get to Jaco island?

Starting Point: Revisiting Old Studies

- Problem 2: Map was burdensome
 - Participants needed more orientation
 - Somewhat ‘burned out’ after orienting themselves

R13, demonstrating orientation

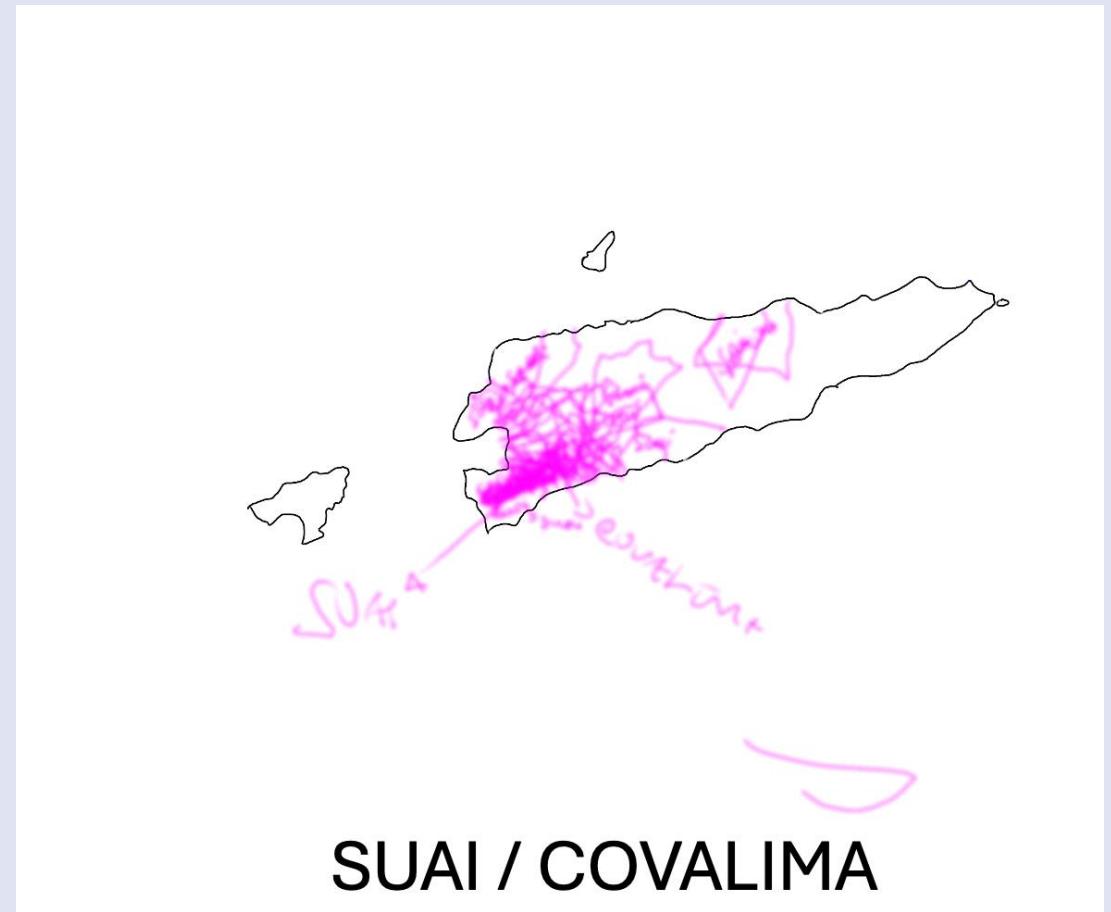

- 15 administrative areas
- Only 6 languages (circled)

Starting Point: Revisiting Old Studies

- Problem 3: Lack of interpretive framework
 - I did not understand the importance of the practice I was seeing (and its uniformity)
 - Aggregate mapping shows that participants had strong need to first label districts
 - Also showed knowledge trends

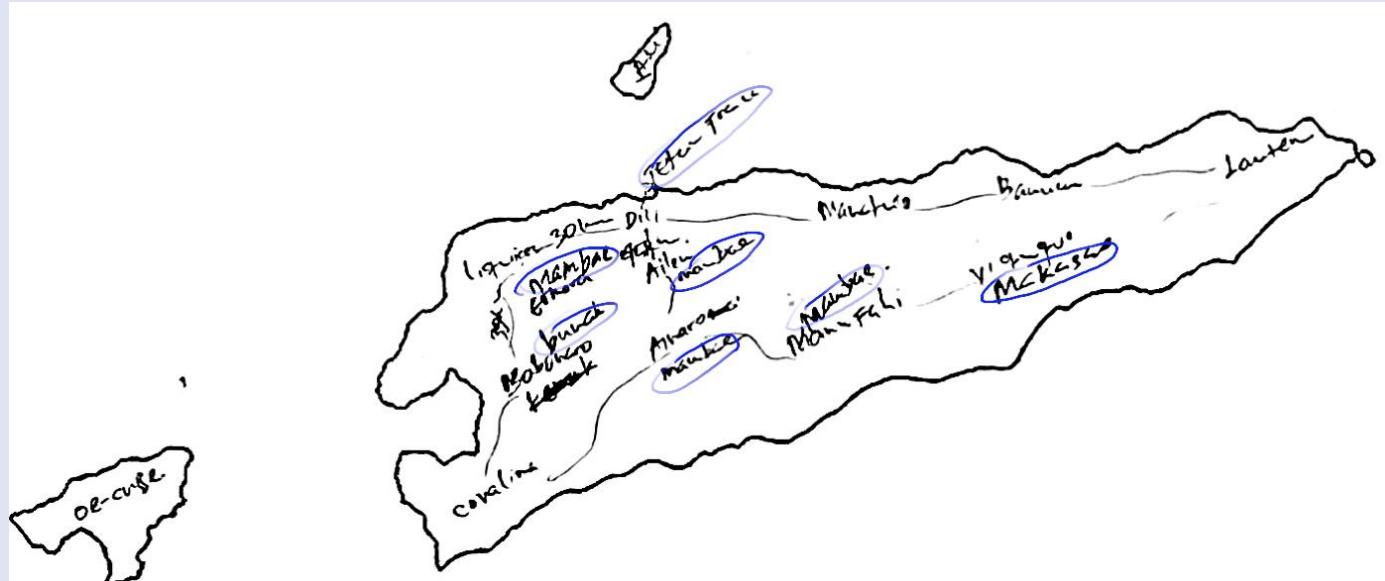

Revision: A Framework of Spatiality

J4, demonstrating three components of spatiality (Britain 2010a)

- Physical: locations
- Social: pathways (lines)
- Psychological: languages (circled)

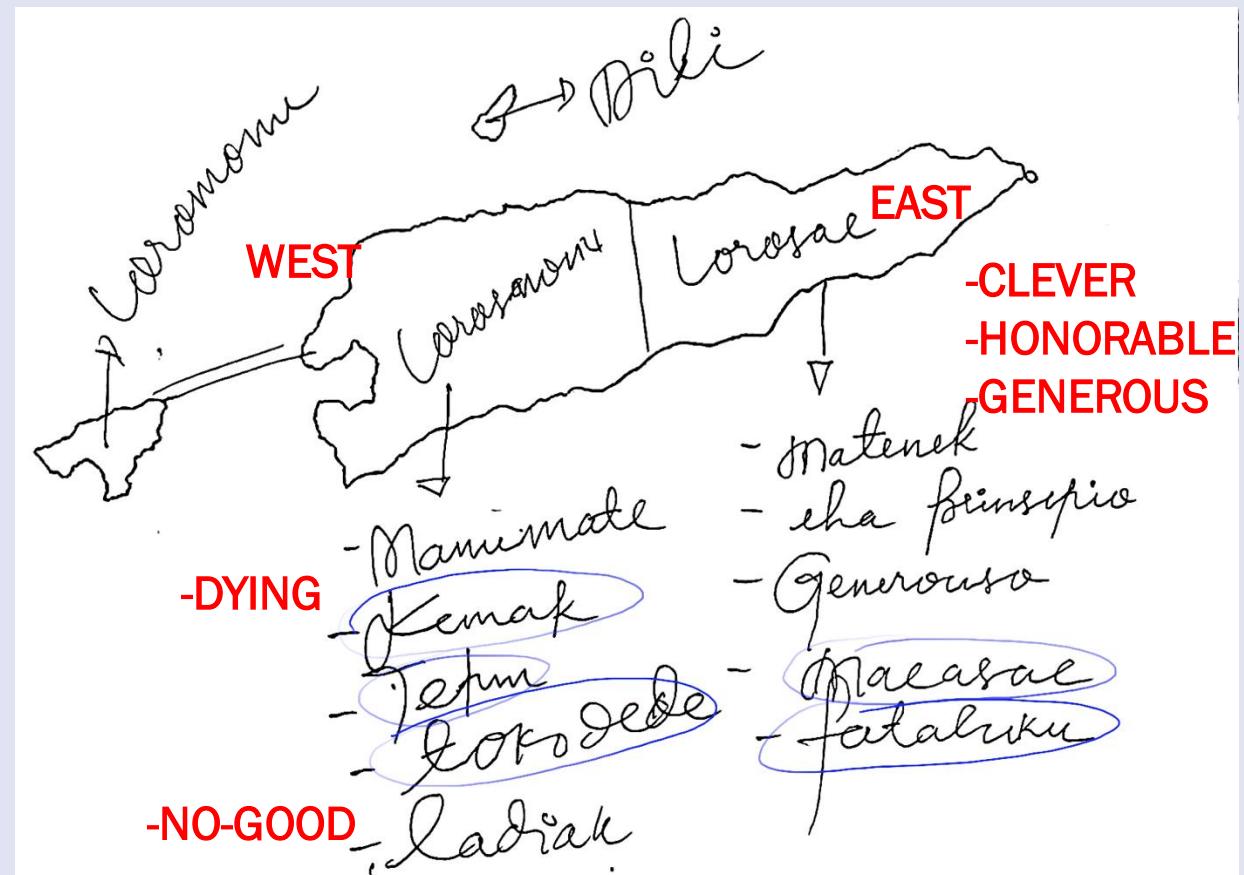

Revision: Space – to – Place

R9, demonstrating spatiality

- Physical: compass directions
- Social: languages (circled)
- Psychological: attributes

Muddling of all three:

- “Space as becoming”

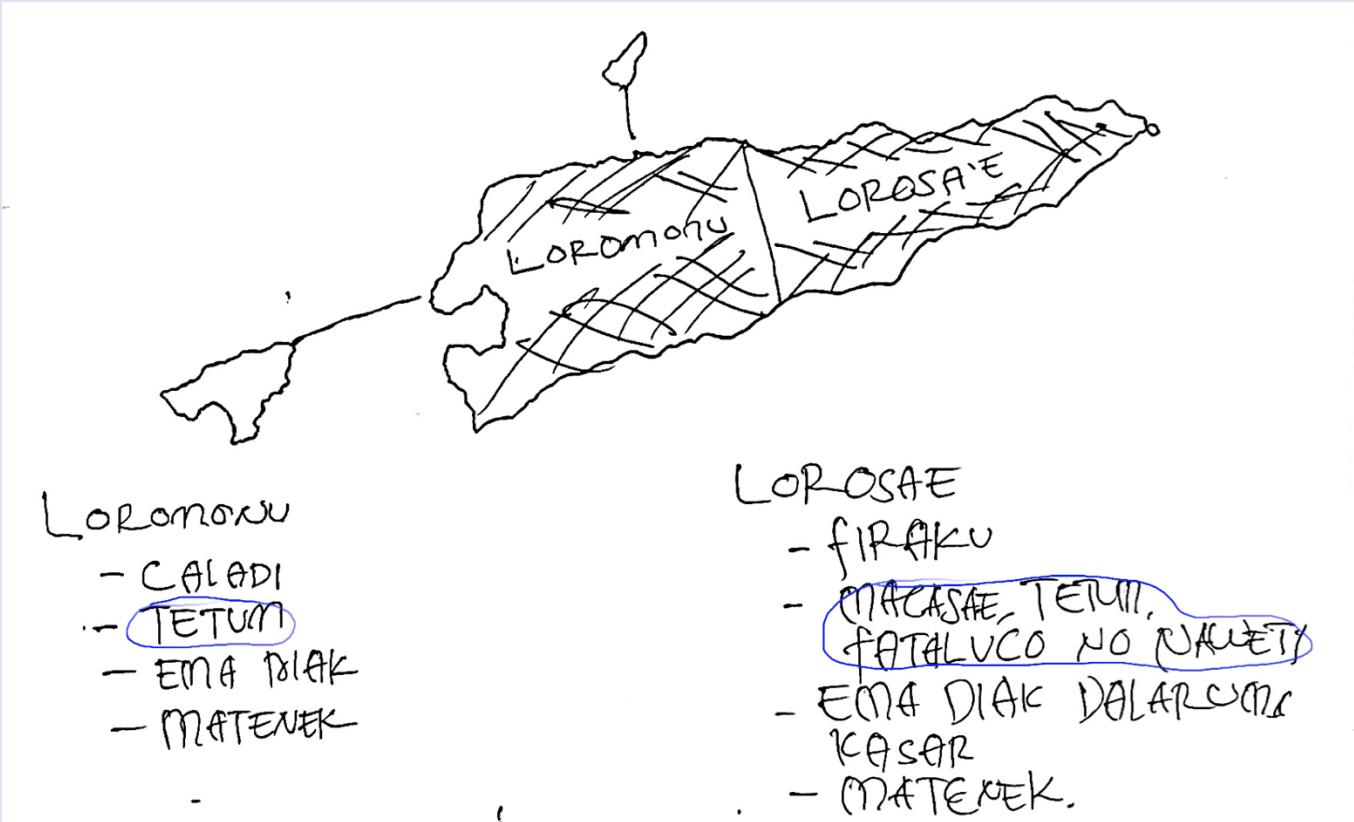

Revision: Interim (Re)-Conclusions

- First re-conclusion: Space-to-place takes different forms for different people
- Second re-conclusion: Group tendencies are an important part of understanding the space-to-place process in Timor-Leste
- Third re-conclusion: Group tendencies are only part of the story
- To get at more, look at each map as telling a story

R4, 22yo male, student from Dili

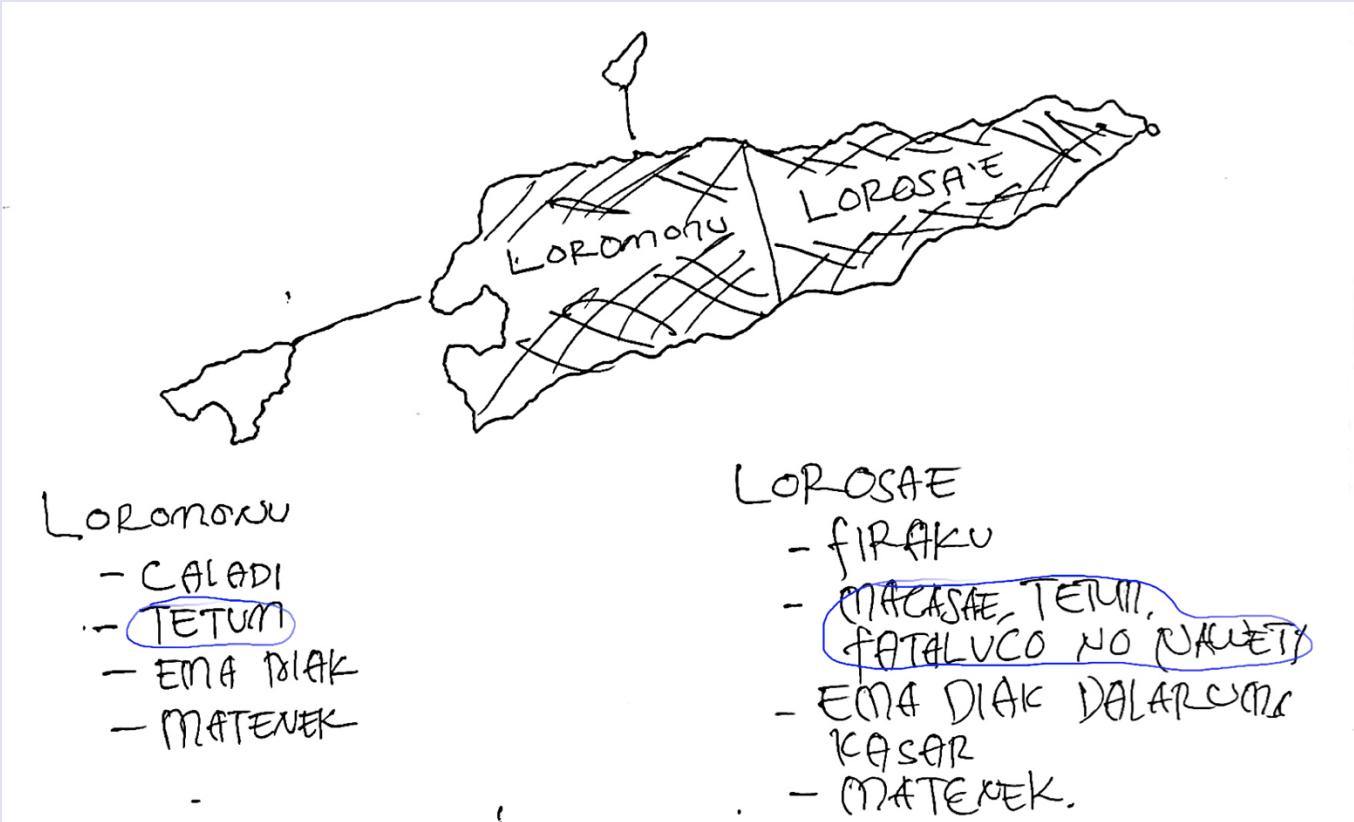

- Parents subsistence farmers
- Speaks Tetun, Indonesian, and Portuguese
- Has never travelled abroad
- One of 4 participants who speaks no other language of Timor-Leste

CALADI - FIRAKU

- R4 includes a handful of languages within the east-west schema
- Value judgments of people
 - Good people
 - Good people sometimes rough

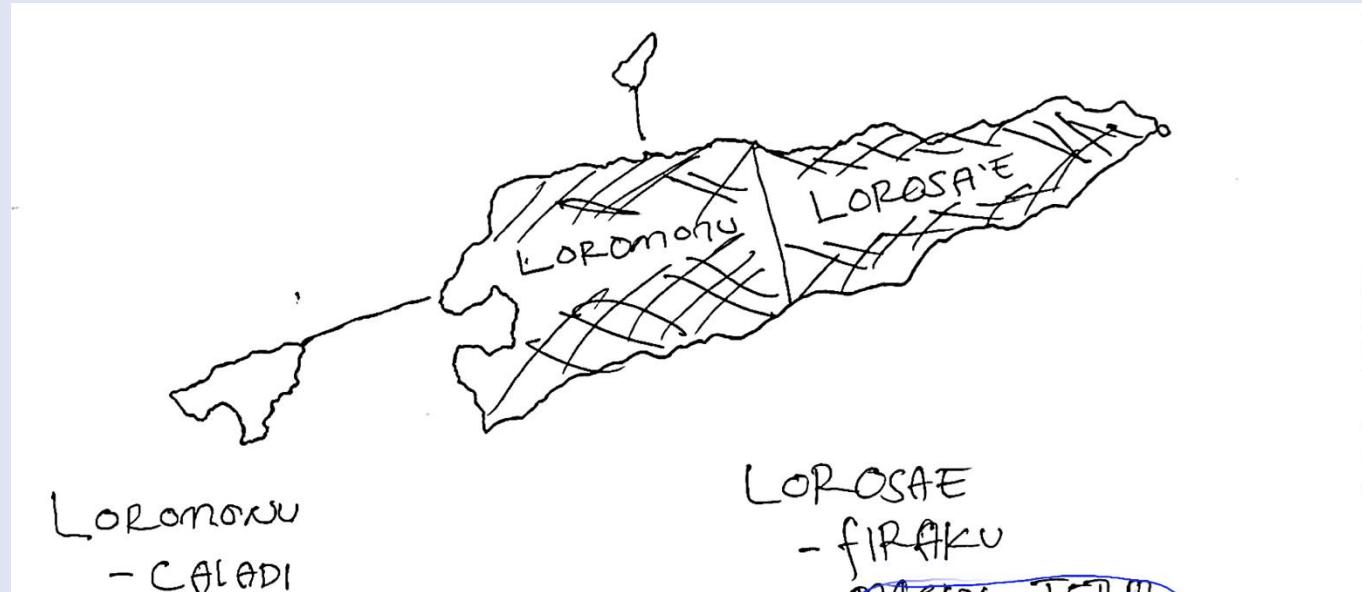

CALADI - FIRAKU

Very old terms

- Pre-colonial: to separate the 'hill peoples' (neg) of the east and west from the 'civilized' Tetun
- 1970s: broadly incorporated all eastern and western Timorese, as separate from the Portuguese

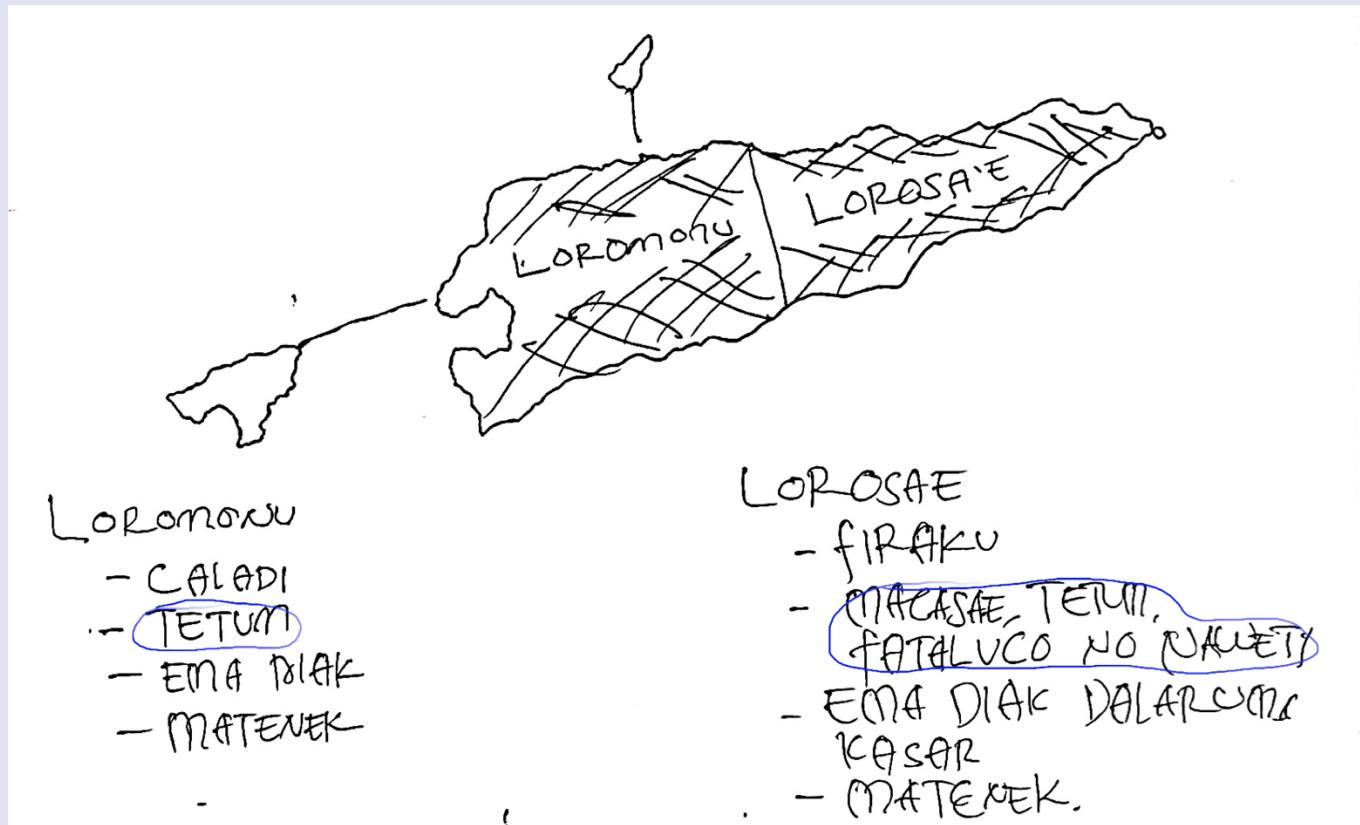

- 1990s: had become associated with personality traits
- 2000: came to (retroactively) represent ideologies toward occupation
- 2006: notable point of conflict
- 2014, appears on R4's map, free from any apparent context!

R4's personal narrative

West:

- Caladi (calm, quiet)
- Tetun
- Good people
- Clever

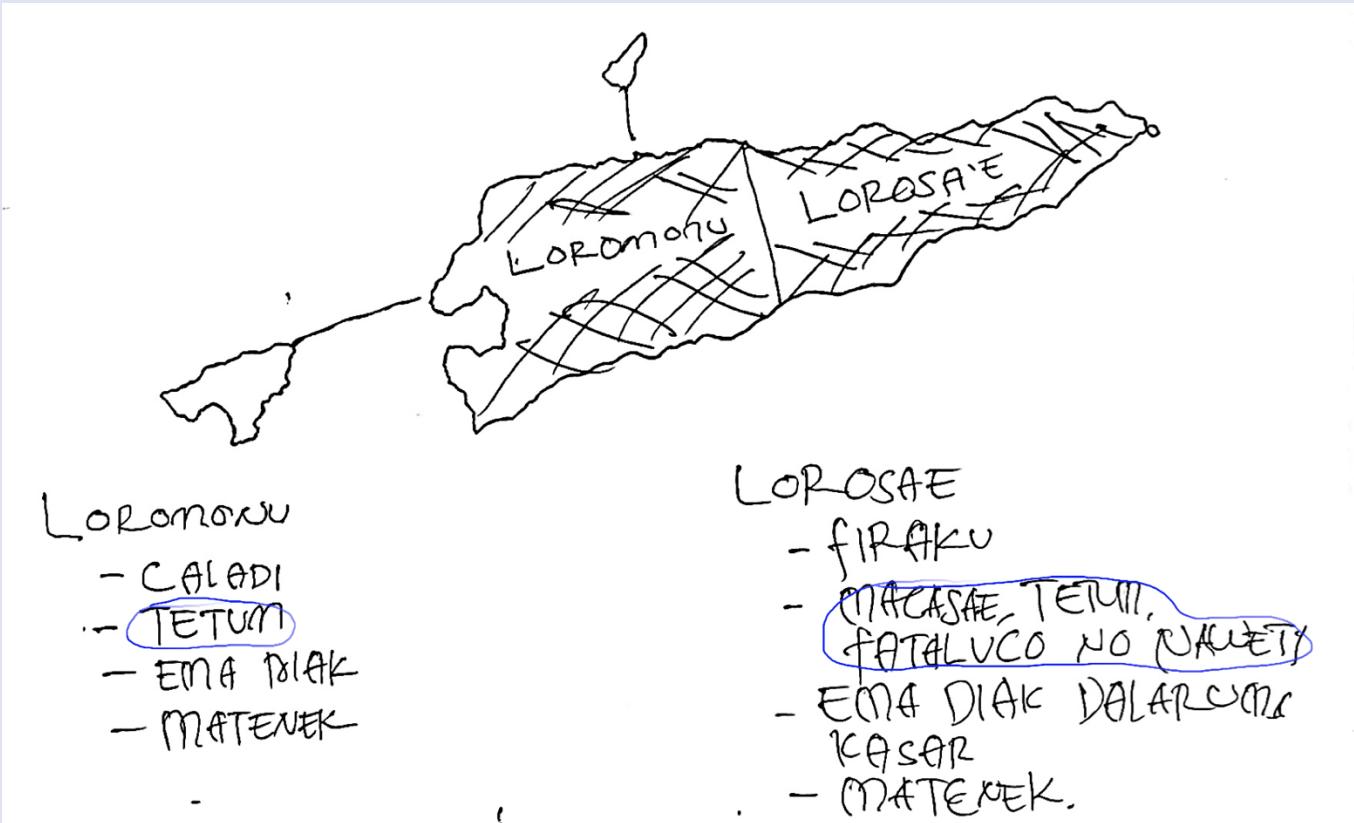

R4's personal narrative

East:

- Firaku (rough, talkative)
- Makasae, Tetun, Fataluku and Naueti
- Good people sometimes rough
- Clever

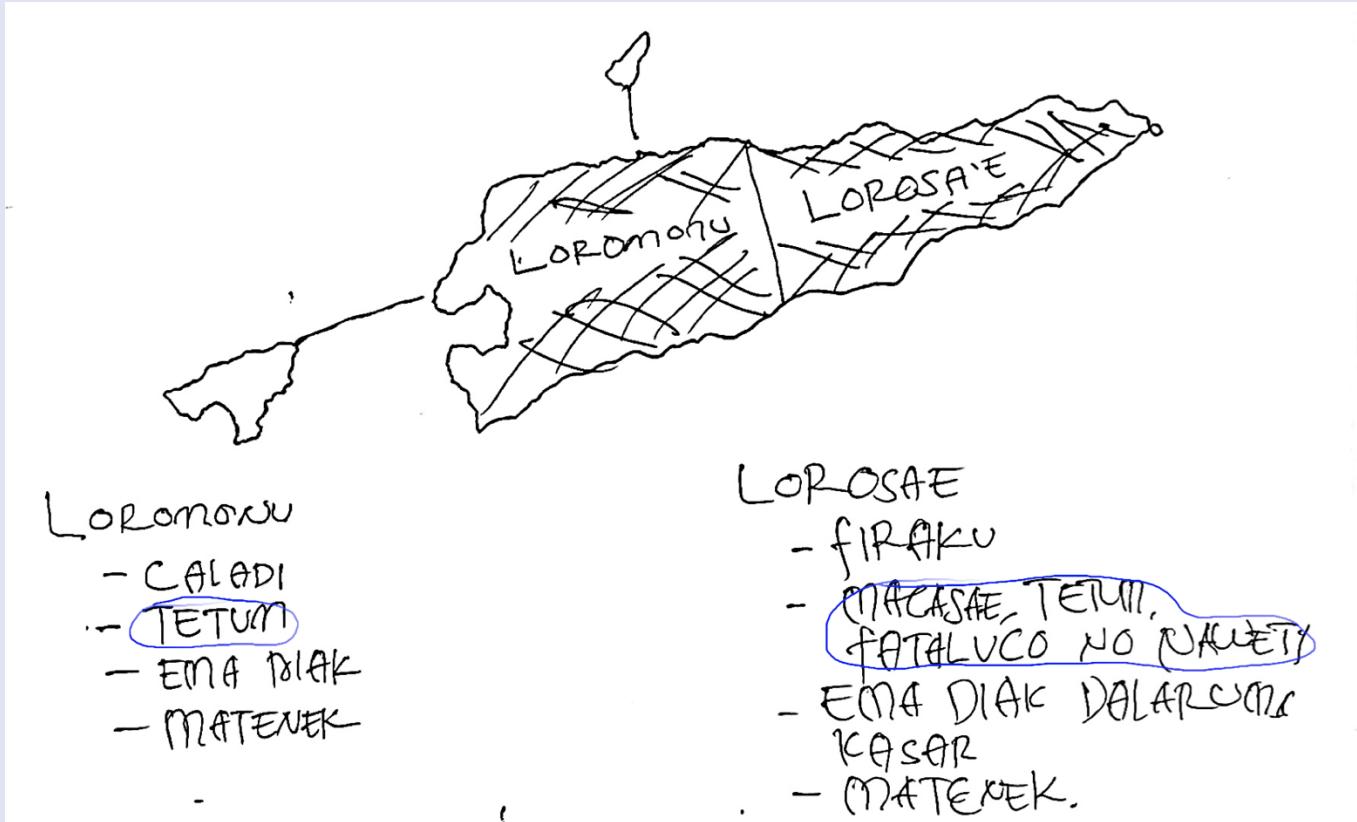

R4's personal narrative

Understands larger social divisions without necessarily articulating the nuance

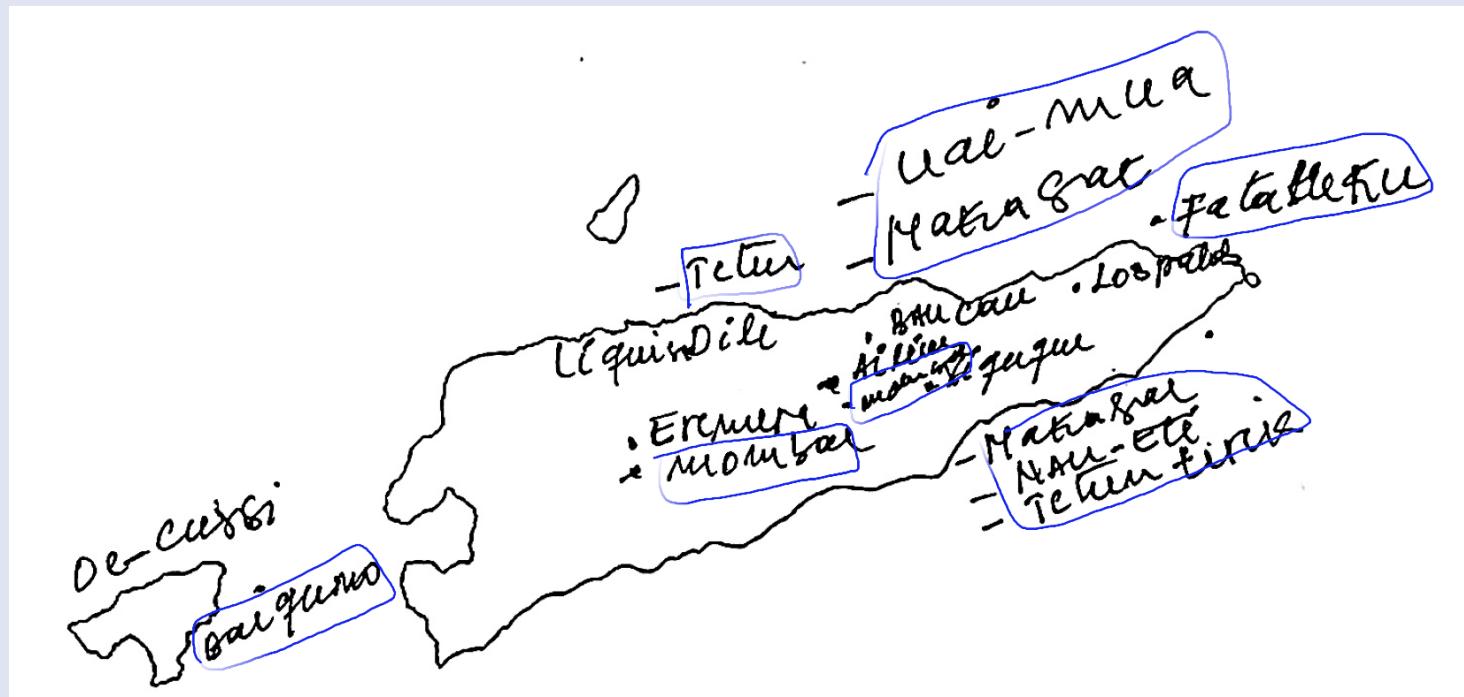

Understands space-language pathway without necessarily needing specifics

M5, 52yo, male, from Viqueque, lives in Dili

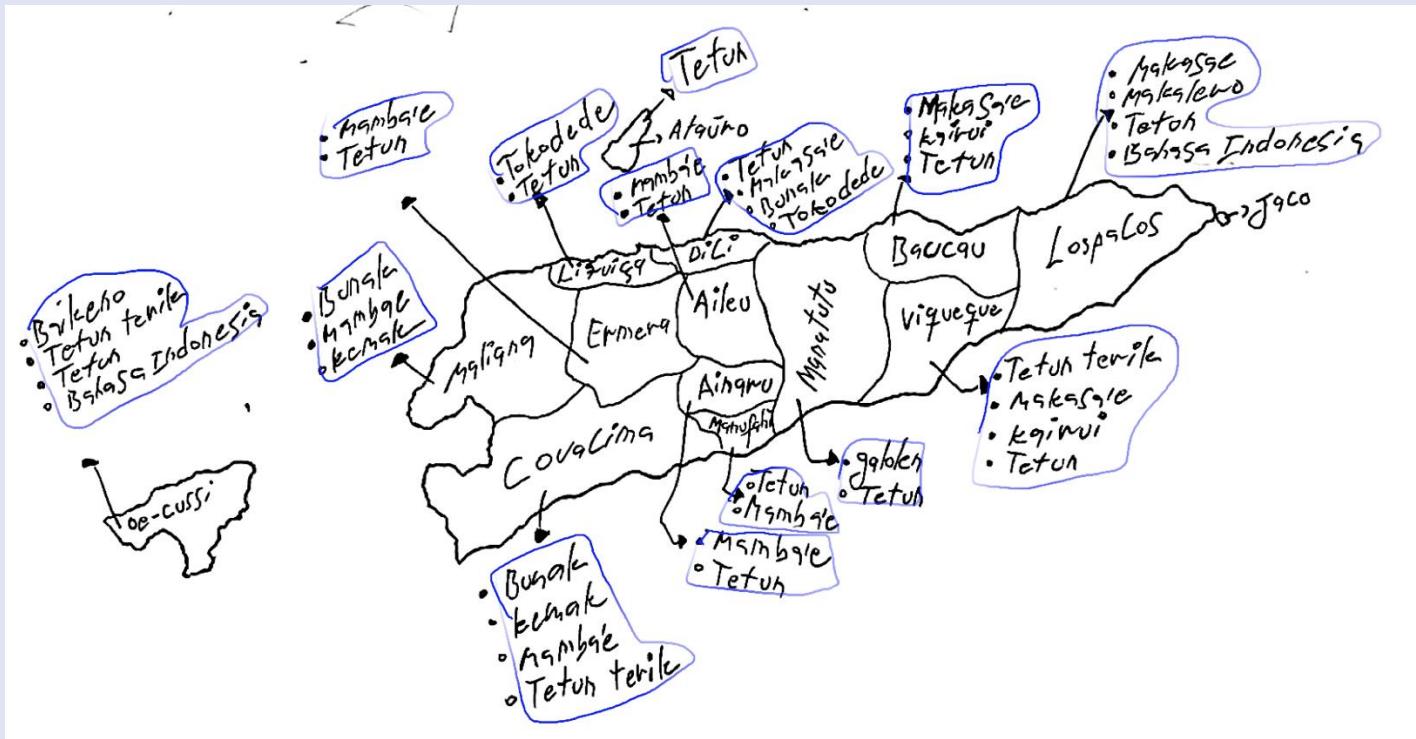

- Professional; only finished primary school; speaks Makasae, Tetun and Indonesian; has never traveled abroad; parents of humble origin
- Showing me his life story; he knows lots about his neighbors, current and previous

A7, 46yo male, professional from Dili

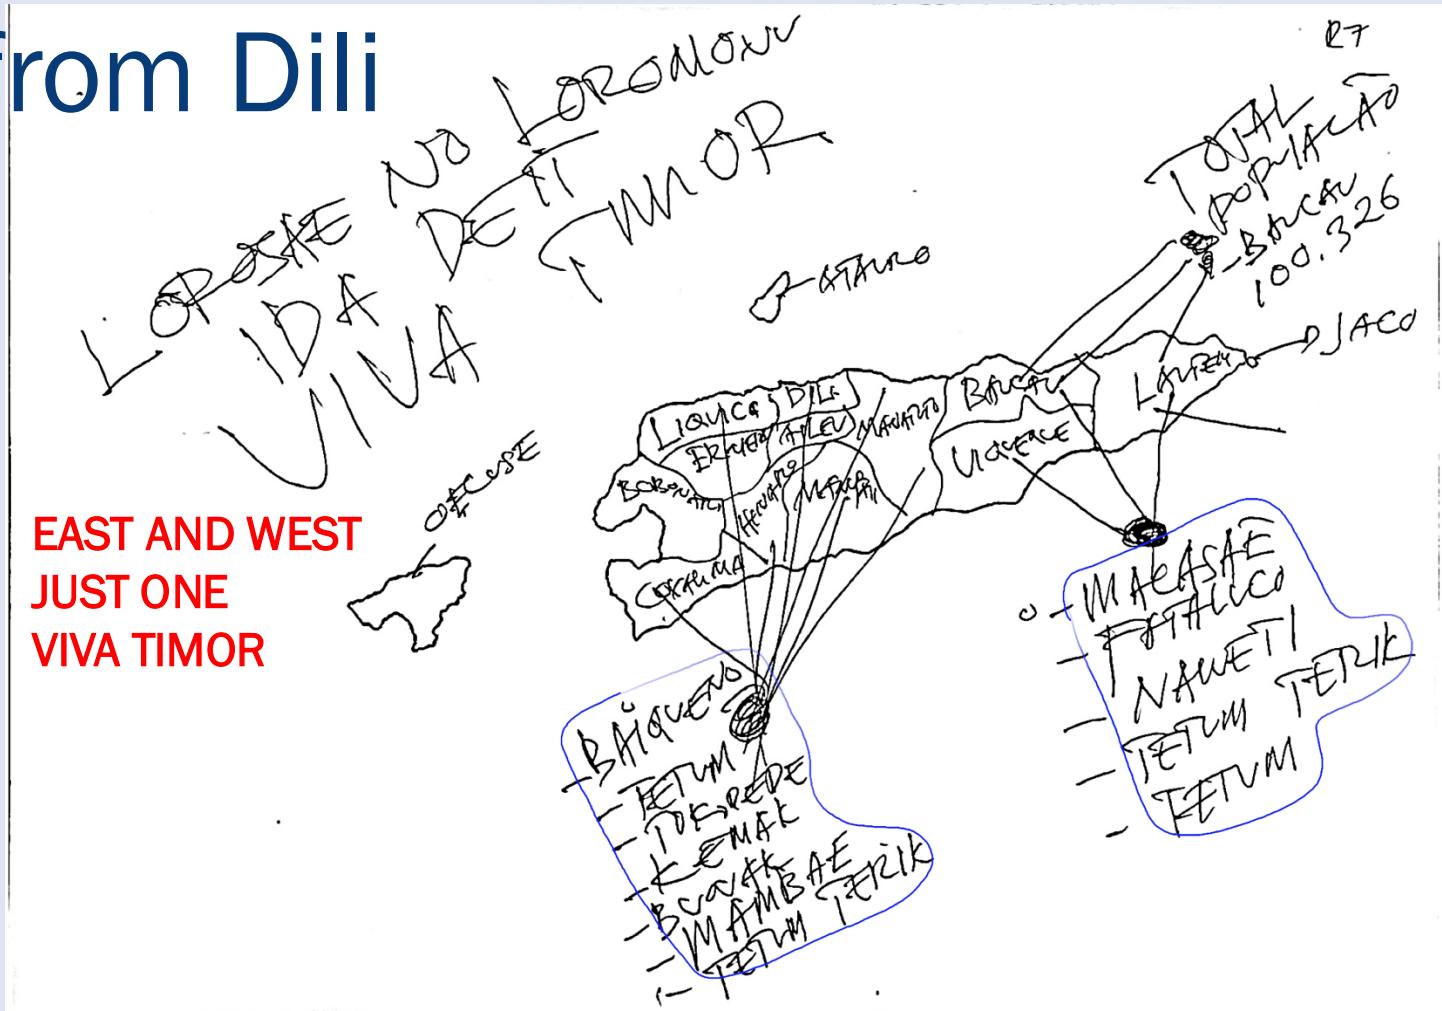

- Speaks Makasae, Tetun, Portuguese, English, Indonesian; has traveled to Australia, Indonesia, Philippines, Singapore, Malaysia; parents of humble origin; only finished primary school
- Engagement with Timor-Leste takes on far more rigid, exo-gazey structure

R7, 29yo, male, from Dili

- Mother is a teacher, father is a farmer; has been to the Indonesian side of Timor Island; speaks Tetun and Indonesian; currently a uni student
- Gives demographic info about Baucau?
- Glomps all languages into two groups; makes strong statement on national unity

Conclusions 1/

■ Meta-Narratives

- Researcher inattention to the structures of spatiality resulted in overfit interpretation:
- Participant discomfort engaging with fundamentally divisive task forced a choice of actions:
 - (1) rely on administration to divide-by-proxy (psychological representations obscured by social manipulations of physical space)
 - (2) emphasize national unity (physical space obscured by psychological representations of social space)

Conclusions 2/

■ Individual Narratives

– Researcher inattention to frameworks of narrative obscured narrative patterns:

- Temporal ordering
- Setting
- Complicated action /disruptive event
- Result

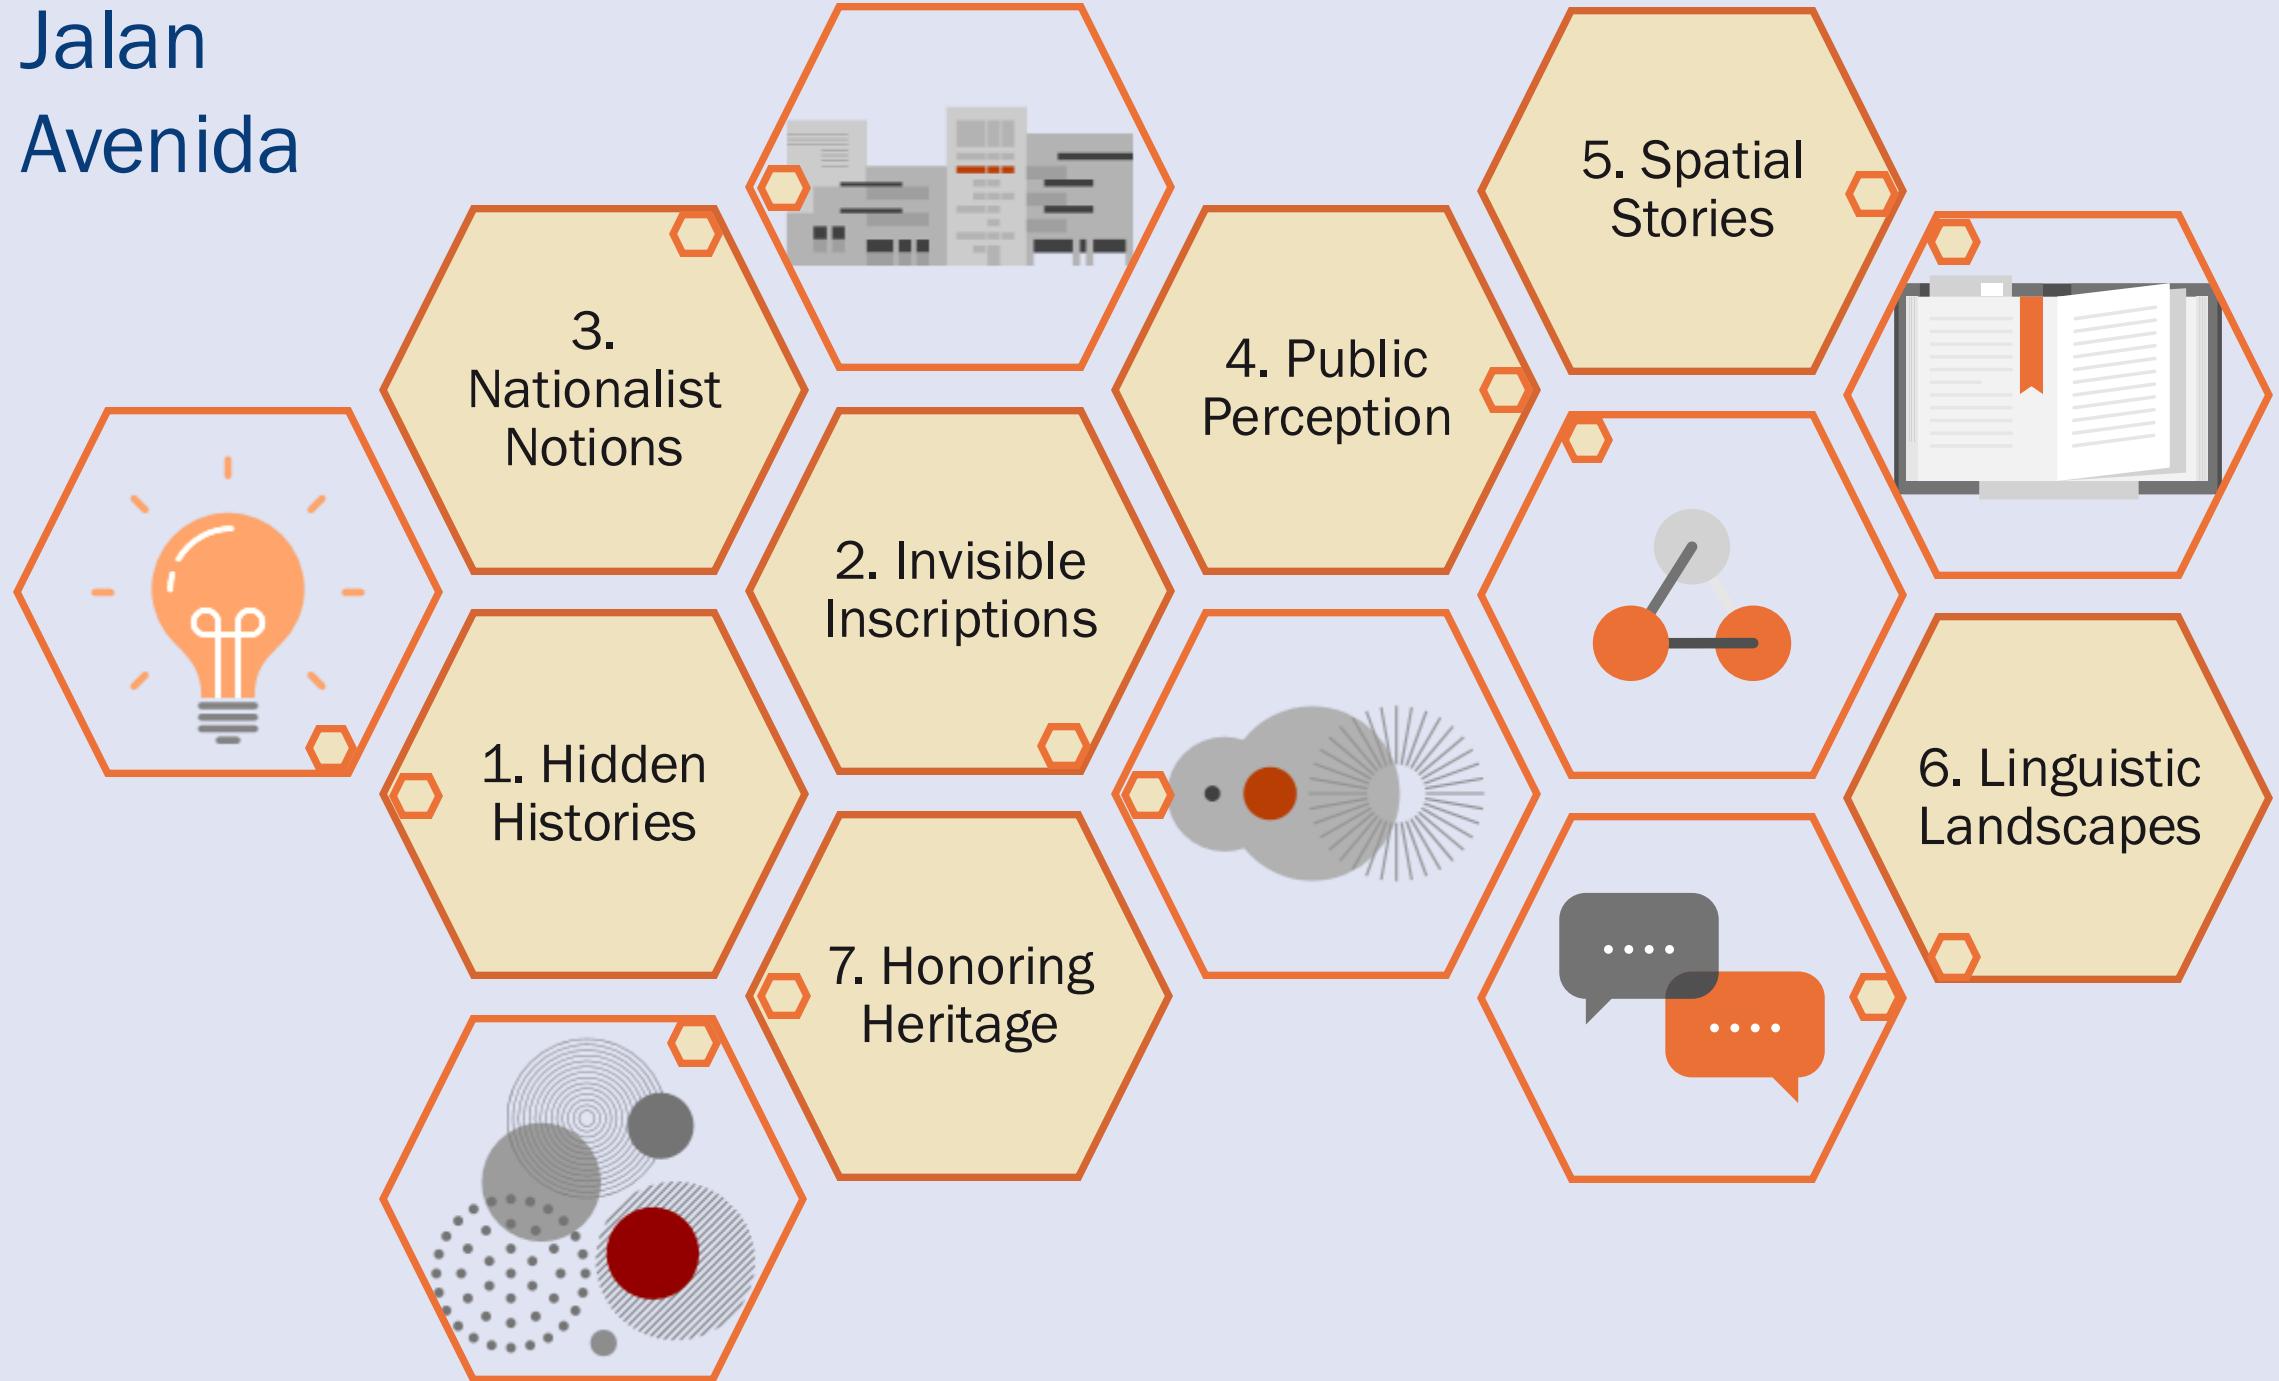

– The postmodernist conception of 'self as emergent' overlaps with the concept of 'space as becoming'

Conclusions 3/

- On Revisiting Old Data
 - Positive experience of self-reflection
 - Opportunities to entertain doubts about one's own work
- New Conclusions
 - Participants didn't fail to understand the task so much as I failed to understand the results
 - Spatiality, like identity, are processes of becoming; that is what my maps show

Jalan Avenida

JALAN AVENIDA A STREETNAME STORY IN TIMOR-LESTE

THANK YOU!